

Ethical considerations
relating to workplace
monitoring

Amanuel Abebe

Employee monitoring

- Employee monitoring is workplace surveillance.

Problem

- The biggest problem or concern is that employees don't like the constant monitoring.
- The other problem is employee doing extra curriculum on the computer instead of working.

Area of impact

- The area of impact is business and employment because the work place monitoring affects both the employees and employers.

How did this problem come about?

- This issue basically came about because employees were using their computers for other reasons other than work.

Stakeholders

- The stakeholders in this issues are employers because they lose money from there employees not doing work, customers not getting there service the proper way due to employees not doing there work the right way.

The measures taken to fix this situations

- The basic measure taken for this situation is pretty much monitor surveillance :this method is where your boss can see what ever you are doing.

Citation

- Kevin Bonsor
<http://computer.howstuffworks.com/workplace-surveillance.htm>